we should not take

nature for granted

I want to tell you a story: my pupils planted some oak acorns two years ago in Autumn

Then in late Winter the Covid virus arrived, schools were shut down, and when six months later they were reopened, this is what we found ...

So, we started to take care of our poor oaks: we changed the pots, we took away the weeds, and we watered them.... And gradually our little plants came back to life

Together we wrote this note....

- Then each pupil chose an element of Nature that they particularly liked
- Everyone drew or created a frame
- Inside the frame they wrote why they are thankful for it
- and explain how they will take care of that natural element and how they protect it.

A hand-drawn border in blue ink surrounds the text. The top part features a range of mountains with a wavy line below them representing a river or stream. The bottom part also shows a range of mountains with a wavy line below them. On the left and right sides, there are vertical wavy lines representing water. Small, simple drawings of fish are scattered throughout the border, particularly near the bottom and sides.

Grazie a Dio, che ha donato l'acqua agli esseri viventi. E' molto buona e per questo fa molto bene e noi non dobbiamo sprecarla.

Grazie Dio, che ci hai donato l'acqua che ci disseta, e l'acqua del mare che ci rinfresca e che ci permette di nuotare.
Me ne prenderò stando attento a non sprecarla.

- Now, I invite you to choose your own element
- Draw a frame or build it with natural elements
- Write inside the frame a thank you note
- Explain how you will take care of it

These are the notes of my class which we collected to form a big poster. You can do the same in your classroom!
